Alsace, land of Castles

Did you know? Alsace is one of the regions in Europe with the highest number of medieval castles — nearly 500 by the end of the Middle Ages. While most castles, manor houses, and fortified homes once located in the plains have vanished over time, around 80 mountain castles remain, scattered across the region and open to visit all year round.

For decades, Alsace's castles have been cared for by voluntary watchmen – dedicated individuals who devote countless hours to preserving this cultural heritage. A rich and vibrant network of associations, unique in France, and a true source of pride for our region.
The annual event 'Tous aux châteaux on May 1st', held every year, offers a unique opportunity

The Alsace Castle Trail, a 450-kilometre hiking route from Wissembourg to Thann, waymarked by the Club Vosgien, invites visitors to explore the region's castles on foot.
Meanwhile, the Route of Castles and Fortified Towns of Alsace is a tourist itinerary featuring 25 sites, offering a wide range of events and activities throughout the year, aimed especially at the general public.

All these experiences – and many more – are at the heart of Alsace's tourism offer, a region proud to be known as the land of castles.

Haut-Koenigsbourg

4th most visited castle in France

70 000 Minimum number of volunteer workdays in castles since 2012

1206 First mention of Lichtenberg Castle.
In its honor: a beer brewed with elderflower, peppermint, dill, and honey – medieval in spirit.

Visitor numbers

In 2024, eco-counters recorded 858,550 visitors at 18 sites, and 826,995 in 2025.

The most visited sites are:

Château du Haut-Koenigsbourg	572 181
Volerie des Aigles, Kintzheim	161 000
Fleckenstein	61 707
Hohlandsbourg	46 038
Lichtenberg	23 064

Haut-Koenigsbourg Castle is ranked as the 4th most visited paid castle in France (following Versailles, Chenonceau, and Chambord).

To ensure the regular maintenance of Alsace's medieval castles, the associations that take care of them regularly organise workdays to care for the ruins. These initiatives are essential for the preservation and safety of the sites. They help prevent overgrowth – which can weaken the remaining structures – and improve accessibility for visitors. These maintenance days usually take place between spring and autumn, either occasionally or on a regular basis.

Without this meticulous and passionate work, many ruins would have disappeared by now. To preserve and support this vital momentum, which plays a key role in passing on history and memory, the Collectivité européenne d'Alsace and Alsace Destination Tourisme support all the associations involved in the field: Châteaux forts vivants – a federation of around twenty members, mainly based in Bas-Rhin –, Châteaux forts d'Alsace, which launched the Alsace Castle Trail together with the Club Vosgien, and more recently, the network of castle watchers in Haut-Rhin.

Die Schlösser, die am leichtesten zu erreichen sind

In Alsace, numerous castles and historical sites can be explored without a car. Bus, train, tram, bicycle, or on foot – these sustainable forms of transportation offer a different way to access the region and combine cultural heritage with sustainable travel: Fleckenstein, Haut-Barr, Wangenbourg, Haut-Koenigsbourg, the Volerie des Aigles, Kaysersberg, or Landskron.
Practical information and route suggestions:

www.fluo.grandest.fr - radfahrenimelsass.de.

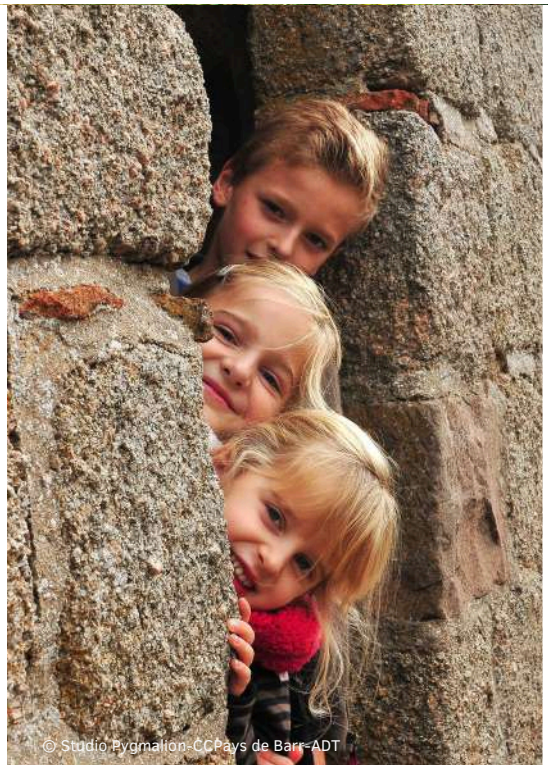

The Alsatian cultural heritage is also particularly close and accessible at many locations. From the village center, short, well-developed, and often scenic footpaths lead directly to the castles. This proximity between settlements, vineyards, and historical buildings allows for a relaxed, immersive exploration of the region and makes history immediately tangible – for example, in Wangenbourg, Spesbourg, Andlau, Eguisheim, Kaysersberg, Ribeauvillé, and Wineck.

Unforgettable experiences in Alsace's castles

© J. Kauffmann-OTMV-ADT

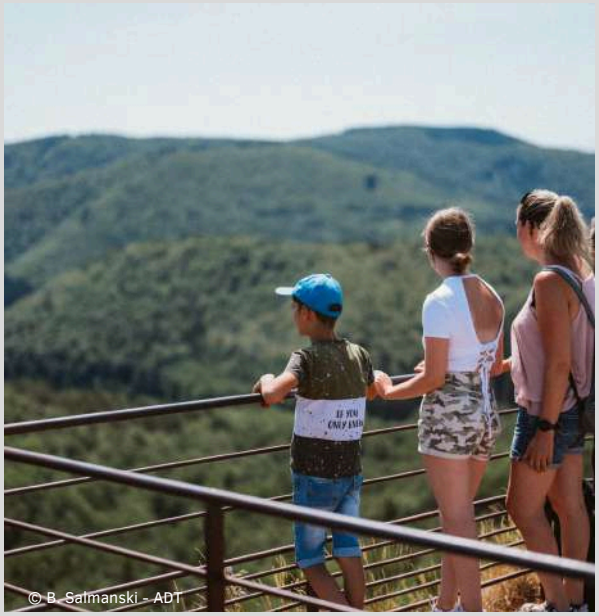

Experience the history of the Middle Ages at Fleckenstein Castle

At the foot of the fortress, you're already impressed!

The outer wall of this impressive fortress rises above the treetops. Wheel tracks mark the thousand-year-old stones on the ground. Without a doubt, Fleckenstein Castle is a panoramic dive into history.

The visit takes you up steep stairs and across metal walkways, with a treasure hunt for children along the way. At the top of the castle, a spectacular and exhilarating panorama awaits. Lose your gaze in the thick wooded coat covering the hills of the Northern Vosges. What a strange feeling to think that our medieval ancestors admired these same landscapes.

Relive the age of the knights at Hohlandsbourg Castle

At Hohlandsbourg Castle, history comes alive like a game!
First, you can't miss the view. This castle is a true eagle's nest; with its 360° panorama, young knights can spot any potential attackers. For children, it's the perfect time to slip into a period dress or a warrior's costume.
In this magnificent 13th-century medieval fortress, the largest in Alsace, children learn history through play.
Questions burst from every side as they explore the daily life of the castle and its inhabitants: weapons, combat, meals, clothing… The visit then continues inside the castle, which houses a museum with objects dating back to the Bronze Age.

Hike to a castle and find happiness along the way

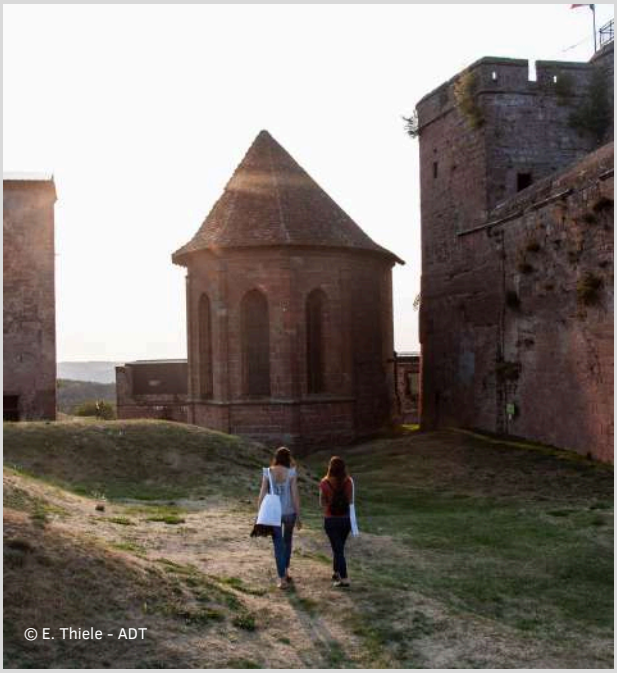

In Alsace, castles can be counted by the dozens, stretching from north to south. They are truly unmatched hiking destinations.
Nouveau-Windstein, Andlau, Saint-Ulrich, Landskron – their very names transport us to another era. Reaching them on foot is the only way to truly feel the wonder they inspire. Some are perched high above the treetops, visible right from the trailhead. Others reveal themselves only at the last bend in the path, when suddenly their silhouette appears, leaving us spellbound. Whether you walk through forests, along vineyards, or across lush pastures, the reward at the end is always the same: the path itself and the breathtaking view are the greatest treasures.

Raise a glass with a view from a remarkable castle

From the terraces of Lichtenberg Castle, colossal ruins of pink sandstone towering over the village of the same name, 800 years of history and an exceptional panorama unfold before us.

A true puzzle of architectural traces from the past, Lichtenberg Castle bears the marks of every era: Gothic, Renaissance, military, and contemporary styles intertwine. Its bold structure intrigues and invites us to explore it in order to uncover all its secrets…

From its 400 m-high promontory, the view is simply breathtaking! And why not raise a glass to soak in the 360° panorama or the unique energy of this place steeped in history?

Do you know these hidden treasures?

Bernstein Castle and the town of Dambach-la-Ville

© ADT-E.List

Perched at 562 m above sea level, Bernstein Castle is one of the oldest castles in Alsace. Beyond exploring a fairly well-preserved ruin, visitors are rewarded with a sweeping view over Dambach-la-Ville, the Alsace plain, and the Black Forest.

When Count of Dabo, lord of Bernstein, left for the Crusades, he entrusted his daughter's upbringing and his lands to his brother. Upon his return 15 years later, poor and destitute, he discovered that his brother had abandoned his daughter and seized his lands. The young woman, by then an innkeeper, recognized her father, and together—with the help of the townspeople—they managed to reclaim their possessions.

The castle and town of La Petite Pierre

Built in the 12th century, the Château de La Petite Pierre and its fortifications were extensively modernised by Vauban in 1684.
At the time, the castle was one of the strategic points controlling the passage between Alsace and Lorraine.
A map is available at the Tourist Office to help you explore the old fortified town, its castle, its museums and the mysterious Maison des Païens, with superb views as a bonus!
Will you find the underground lake of La Petite Pierre? It is an extraordinary system of galleries and cisterns that extends beneath the town to collect runoff water. But be careful not to get too close to the water, as a mysterious breath extinguishes overly curious lanterns...

The three castles and the town of Ribeauvillé

Between vineyards and mountains, Ribeauvillé is a charming town that has preserved its historical heritage.
In the 14th century, powerful lords undertook to build the town walls and thus had three castles built. The magnificent ruins of the three Ribeaupierre castles (Haut-Ribeaupierre, Girsberg and Saint-Ulrich) overlook the medieval town: discover them on the marked hiking trail known as the 'Circuit des trois châteaux' (Three Castles Trail). The view is breathtaking, but you have to work for it!

The tour of the three castles of the Alsatian Jura

In the far south of Alsace, the Alsatian Jura combines the ruggedness of limestone landscapes with the gentleness of an ancient agricultural land.

From the network of castles that guarded it in the Middle Ages, the two links of the Alsatian Jura still preserve the haughty ruins of the castles of Morimont, Ferrette and Landskron, now showcased via an 80 km hiking trail to be completed in four stages.

A stone's throw from Ferrette Castle, hidden at the foot of an imposing cliff, lies the Grotte des Nains (Cave of the Dwarves). Legend has it that a tribe of dwarves lived there, helping the inhabitants of Ferrette with their daily chores. They wore long robes that hid their feet. One morning, some overly curious young girls went to the cave and sprinkled sand at the entrance. At dawn, the dwarves came out, and the girls discovered that they left goat-like footprints in the sand. They burst out laughing. The dwarves felt betrayed and sank into the depths of the mountain, never to emerge again.

Lorentzen – la Grange aux Paysages

One of the few remaining fortified castles on flat land, nestled in the heart of the bucolic, rolling countryside of Alsace Bossue.

Built between 1329 and 1334 by Count Frederick II of Sarrewerden, Prince of Nassau, this lowland castle, once surrounded by water (or 'Wasserburg'), was intended to protect the interests of the county against nearby Lorraine. It witnessed the peasant revolt of 1722. A few decades later, the last Countess of Nassau to reside there made headlines by converting to Catholicism in a predominantly Lutheran region. When the territory was annexed to Alsace in 1793, the castle was divided into residential lots, which were sold as national property in 1792 to several families. Their descendants still live there today.

The three castles and the town of Eguisheim

Located on a hill overlooking the Colmar region, the ruins of the Three Castles (Dagsbourg, Wahlenbourg, and Weckmund) are among the symbols of the Alsatian landscape.

On these heights stand three keep towers dating from the 12th and 13th centuries. The castles were destroyed in 1466 during the War of the Six Deniers; the ruins we see today bear witness to this conflict.

The Trois-Châteaux site is an enchanting and easily accessible place to walk. At the foot of the keep, an exceptional panorama opens up over the vineyards, the Alsace Plain and the Black Forest. A pleasant nature outing for young and old alike! Come and admire the golden reflections of the stone bathed in the evening light.

Kagenfels, Birkenfels and the town of Obernai

Built in 1262 by Albrecht Kage, an episcopal minister, Kagenfels Castle has faced numerous sieges over the centuries and wars. Perched at an altitude of 677 metres in the heart of the forests of Obernai and Bernardswiller, the castle is located in the commune of Ottrott, not far from Mont Sainte-Odile. It has been digitally restored in 4D and can be viewed at www.kagenfels.org.

Birkenfels Castle was built around 1260 with a three-storey main building featuring niche-shaped arrow slits and large multi-window bays. Today, you can visit the ruins of its unfinished keep.

In the past, the lush forest around Kagenfels Castle was inhabited by a giant, the ‘Baumklopfer’. He would bang so hard on the tree trunks that the terrified villagers no longer dared to go into the woods. Listen carefully in the early morning to hear the trees vibrate with the echo of the Baumklopfer.

Ortenbourg and Ramstein

Located at an altitude of 443 metres at the end of a ridge, Ortenbourg Castle, built between 1260 and 1265 by Rudolf of Habsburg, is one of the most beautiful ruins in the Rhine Valley.

A masterpiece of military architecture with its high curtain wall surrounding a 32-metre keep, it is visible from afar and blends remarkably well into the landscape. The keep offered six floors of firing positions for defence, and its pentagonal design made it easier to deflect projectiles from attackers.
The recently created association 'Les sentinelles de l'Ortenbourg' (The Sentinels of Ortenbourg) aims to preserve, promote and bring the castle to life.

The Ramstein Castle, built in 1293 by Otto von Ochsenstein, Grand Bailiff of Alsace, is located below its mighty neighbour, Ortenbourg Castle.

All that remains of the residential tower are two sections of wall showing different levels, a fireplace and a large arrow slit facing Ortenbourg, where a war machine capable of firing projectiles at the castle could be placed.
For several years, a team of volunteers, the 'Ramstein watchmen', have been clearing and consolidating the walls, towers and foundations.

Visits to the site are possible during Heritage Days.

The Principality of Salm

300 years ago, not far from Alsace, in the Déodatie (Land of Saint-Dié), there existed the smallest independent state on the European continent. This small area in the Vosges was an autonomous principality between 1751 and 1793, known for its famous abbey, its collection of works by Rembrandt and Rubens, and for hosting Voltaire. A unique history that can be explored at three locations:

Pierre-Percée Castle

Hermann II of Salm, from a prominent family in the Belgian Ardennes, settled in the region in the 11th century and founded the County of Salm. As the patron of the Abbey of Senones, he acquired the Pierre-Percée Castle through marriage, the remains of which still overlook the lake of the same name, also known as "Little Canada." Walks, water sports, kayaking, and cycling tours are possible here.

Salm Castle near La Broque

n the 13th century, the Counts of Salm built this second castle to secure their power in the region, amidst the forests of the upper Bruche Valley. During a visit by the Princes of Salm in October 1779, it benefited from one of the earliest forms of tourism development. A well-preserved road from 1650 connected the castle to the Abbey of Senones. Since 2004, the Les Veilleurs de Salm association has been responsible for preserving the ruins.

Senones, a small town with character and former capital

A walk through the streets and past the town palaces leads into the world of the Grand Siècle. In front of the château, across from the abbey, volunteers in historical costumes regularly perform the changing of the guard.

In the footsteps of the Habsburg dynasty

The Habsburg dynasty was one of the most influential royal houses in Europe.

From 1273 to 1918, the figures of this dynasty influenced and shaped the history of Europe.
The Alsace region has a rich historical past linked to this family, in Haguenau, Strasbourg, the castles of Ortenbourg and Ramstein, in the Val de Villé, in Sélestat, Bergheim and Colmar, at Hohlandsbourg Castle, in Ensisheim, Thann, Ottmarsheim and Ferrette...
Follow in their footsteps with this cultural itinerary from the Council of Europe.

Alsace, a land of castles… for outdoor enthusiasts

Since most castles need to be reached by hiking, they represent effort, community, and athletic challenge.
Particularly prominent are the numerous trail runs in Alsace.
They uniquely combine nature, cultural heritage, and athletic performance.
The UTMB is the most well-known example, but certainly not the only one.
Many other runs can be discovered and experienced on Visit Alsace.

- May 1, 2026: Trails of Château Bernstein
- May 15, 2026 - Ultra Trail of the Knights by UTMB Lac Blanc
- November 2026: Trail la Landsberg
- Trail of the Castles of Saverne – Individual Trail (without guide)

Travelling through Time with digital tools and 3D technology

Modern digital technologies offer new, playful ways to explore medieval cultural heritage and enable the discovery of castles in an interactive, engaging, and contemporary manner.

- Video game "Age of Castles" – An interactive game to explore ten Alsatian castles, including Haut-Koenigsbourg, Fleckenstein, Wangenbourg, Ortenbourg, Lichtenberg, Wineck, Saint-Ulrich, Lutzelbourg, Hohlandsbourg, and Kaysersberg.

- Interactive search "Die Schatzsuche" – A year-round experience involving treasure hunts along the castles of the Rhine Plain.

- YouTube video for the "Age of Castles" experience (Trailer) – A visual introduction to the game and its castle adventures.

- Mobile app "Sur la piste des trésors d'Alsace" – Treasure/puzzle experiences around the Haguenau area.

- Digital castle app "Burg in ze Pocket" – Virtual 3D castle reconstructions, including Haut-Andlau, Fleckenstein, Haut-Koenigsbourg, Ortenberg, Landsberg, Spesbourg, and castle of Kaysersberg.

- Numbered rally game "Jeu de piste numérique – Le Château de Lorentzen" – Puzzle path.

- Playful discovery trail – "Balade ludique – La poudre à l'œil" – Interactive walks and games where children observe and gather clues (various villages/landscapes in Alsace).

Across Borders:
The Castles of the Upper Rhine

he Upper Rhine Valley is a land of castles, with a shared history that connects Alsace and its neighboring regions in Germany and Switzerland: that of the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation. Many historical facts and fantastic stories await discovery by families or friends, following the traces of the European Middle Ages.

Before Alsace was annexed to France in the 17th century, it had been one of the vibrant centers of the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation for centuries. As a result, it shares a common culture with its neighbors in Baden-Württemberg, Rhineland-Palatinate, and Switzerland, reflected in its language, cuisine, and architecture.

To promote this shared heritage, around 30 French – including Alsace Destination Tourisme – Swiss, and German partners and institutions, at the initiative of the European Community of Alsace (CeA) and the Ortenaukreis, collaborate in the Interreg project "Rheinburgen," which was launched on October 15, 2022.

The project focuses on four main areas: culture, tourism, research, and citizenship. It is co-financed with European funds (ERDF) amounting to €2.9 million as part of the INTERREG Upper Rhine program.

As part of the Interreg "Rheinische Burgen" project, ADT has coordinated and funded the production of tourist videos. The videos are based on 3D/4D models created by INSA Strasbourg, in collaboration with Archéologie Alsace. The goal is to allow a wide audience to imagine the castles in their medieval heyday.
Eight films, each lasting 1 minute 30 seconds, are available to explore: here

The European Community of Alsace (CeA) coordinates the "Châteaux et légendes" festival, a series of fantastic performances and animations inspired by the world of artist John Howe. Planned dates and venues:

Fleckenstein Castle – May 8
Haut-Barr Castle – May 9
Engelbourg Castle – May 14
Kaysersberg Castle – May 16
Lichtenberg Castle – May 24
Wangenbourg Castle – May 25
Hohlandsbourg Castle – May 31
Spesbourg Castle – June 7
Haut-Koenigsbourg Castle – June 13
Ferrette Castle – June 27
Hugstein Castle – June 28
